

I have been receiving at least one email/day from a company that sells products for male sexual performance. The name of the company is nowhere on the ad. I have tried to follow their "opt out" instructions but their page can never be found and appears to be bogus to me. I have tried emailing the company with no results. They use a different user name everytime they send something so my orders to "junk" the mail don't work. How can I get rid of this incredible nuisance? I am never given the actual ability to "unsubscribe". Isn't this a violation of some kind of rules? I have cut and pasted the ad below.

Thank you for any help,

Leslie A. Personett, DVM
